

Jessica P. Einhorn – Dean, Paul H. Nitze School of Advanced International Studies, Johns Hopkins University and Member of the Board of Directors, Center for Global Development

In June 2002, Jessica P. Einhorn became the Dean of the Paul H. Nitze School of Advanced International Studies of The Johns Hopkins University. Most recently, she served as a consultant with Clark & Weinstock, a Washington public affairs firm, since 2000. Prior to that, Ms. Einhorn spent nearly twenty years at the World Bank. From 1996 to 1998, she was the Bank's Managing Director. She also served as Vice President and Treasurer at the Bank. Before joining the Bank, Ms. Einhorn held positions in the U.S. Treasury Department, the U.S. State Department, and the U.S. International Development Cooperation Agency.

Ms. Einhorn serves on the boards of directors of Pitney Bowes and the Center for Global Development. She also chairs the Global Advisory Board of J.E. Robert Companies. She is a trustee for the Rockefeller Brothers Fund and a director of the Institute for International Economics and of the Council on Foreign Relations. She is also a member of the Executive Committee of the Trilateral Commission and a former trustee of the German Marshall Fund.